

Numerical methods for district heating networks

Raul Borsche

Abstract

Models of district heating systems contain a network of advection equations. To solve these problems efficiently we investigate high order implicit schemes. With an active flux discretization spurious oscillations can be reduced significantly. Formulating these methods with upwind type stencils, the problem can be solved iteratively and thus combined with limiting techniques. In numerical tests we show results on real scale networks.